that the rates had gone slowly but steadily upwards.

Mayor Buckingham concluded his remarks by reference to figures taken from the reports of the Insurance Commissioner for Connecticut. "These figures," he said, "show that in ten years the insured of this State have paid in premiums, to the fire insurance companies doing business in Connecticut, $34.518,000. They have received back in payments for fire losses but $115,108,000$, leaving to the companies to pay the expense of doing business and for profits the sum of $15,510,000."

These figures, the Mayor said, were fairly representative of the situation in Bridgeport, and indicate that substantial rate reduction should take place.
